A Scots Quair

Synopsis

Written by one of the all-time greats of Scottish literature, truly revolutionary, "A Scots Quair" is a trilogy of novels: "Sunset Song" (1932), "Cloud Howe" (1933) and "Grey Granite" (1934). At each book's core is the heroine Chris Guthrie, as she grows from a child into adulthood through the Great War to the development of communism in the 1920s. Grassic Gibbon's writing is unique and riveting, blending Scots and English in an accessible style, and eloquent in its humanity and celebration of nature.

A grand look, through 3 connected long novels, of the movement from the little rented Scots farms to the towns and then to the cities. Following one character through all the changes works well as the socio-economic and religious changes register clearly in her life. He's a writer of dozens of books about Scotland.

This is a beautiful book and also a must for writers. Each chapter succeeds as a stand-alone story, yet those stories are woven skillfully into an even more meaningful whole. It's not a book I pick up often, but I do come back to it again and again over time.

This is an excellent read and depicts "The Mearns" district in Aberdeenshire, Scotland accurately as it was in days gone by. This book arrived on time and in excellent condition. No issues with the service.

A wonderful trilogy of Scotland that was made into a PBS series during the early 80's. This book is difficult to find so snap it up while it is available at this price.

Beautiful writing for a wonderful Scottish story. I savored every word like a fine wine.
