A Bridge Dead In The Water (Earthworks)

Synopsis

This collection by Mohawk poet, James Thomas Stevens explores the effects of colonization on either side of the Bering Strait - China and North America. Three long poems focus on mapping, post-colonial emergencies and propaganda, while the short poems are personal experiences in China and Native America.

James Thomas Stevens is an incredible poet; at once intelligent, precise, and provocative, his work can level you with a single line. Ever since I read "Combing the Snakes From His Hair," and the line "sentenced to hear the cry of all things broken" literally tore me apart, I've loved Stevens' work. Please find some of his poetry online and buy any of his collections you can get your hands on. Trust me, this is a poet who is putting out work worth reading.
