Ocean Power: Poems From The Desert (Sun Tracks)

Synopsis

The annual seasons and rhythms of the desert are a dance of clouds, wind, rain, and floodâwater in its roles from bringer of food to destroyer of life. The critical importance of weather and climate to native desert peoples is reflected with grace and power in this personal collection of poems, the first written creative work by an individual in O'odham and a landmark in Native American literature. Poet Ofelia Zepeda centers these poems on her own experiences growing up in a Tohono O'odham family, where desert climate profoundly influenced daily life, and on her perceptions as a contemporary Tohono O'odham woman. One section of poems deals with contemporary life, personal history, and the meeting of old and new ways. Another section deals with winter and human responses to light and air. The final group of poems focuses on the nature of women, the ocean, and the way the past relationship of the O'odham with the ocean may still inform present day experience. These fine poems will give the outside reader a rich insight into the daily life of the Tohono O'odham people.

I can't put my finger on it, but this is one of the books I keep next to my bed for when my soul is feeling black. It's simple, home-ey, powerful. Also, if you happen to be from southern Arizona, it's good to get to know your neighbors a bit more. When I feel like I'm in an urban jail, I remember the moon hanging over the Sea of Cortez in one poem, I and I remember there's so much more to the universe...

I bought this book for my daughter in college. She was in a panic because she couldn't find some books needed for her Indian Lit class and the university bookstore was backordered. I paid a fraction of the price at the bookstore, received it in one day, and it was in perfect condition. The bonus-the university bookstore bought it back and she made a profit!
